BARNES BEATS HUTCHINSON ON THE LAST HOLE

Pro Golfers Carry Fight to the Thirty-sixth Green at Siwanoy.

MATCH PRATTY LOST

BY POOR PUTTING

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y. Oct. 14 .- Jim Barnes triumphed over Jock Hutchinon the Siwamby links to-day in the match that decided the championship of the Professional Colfers Association of America and the ownership of the big Rodman Wanamaker trophy for the next twelve months. The struggle, which was witnessed by one of the biggest galleries of the season, was carried all the way to the thirty-mixth green, and there Hutchinson missed a putt less than five feet long which if made would have carried the match to extra holes. A moment of ar Hu chinson's hall had stopped on the edge of the cup Barnes stepped up and from only a ta d aw y ran down the putt that won the match by the nar-rowest rosethle marrin, I up. It was not the first putt that Hutchinson had missed for all day long he was throwing away opportunity after oppor-tunity by his poor work on the green. Since the season began Jock his adopted a Schenechally patter, but he has not adapted his nutting style to the new club. He still hits the ball as though club. He still hits the ball as though he were using the old putting clesk with which he grew up over in Scotland and it cost him dehrly lo-day. From the tee and through the green he was outplaying Barnes nearly all the way, but once within purting distance his skill seemed to desert him. There was a grean from the gallers when that last purtuayed out of the cun, but it was an expression of disappointment and not of surprise. Every once ever Jock himself, feared that it would not so down even before the ball left his club.

Barnes on the other hand come with some excellent putting fust his work on the greens saved him, esne-cially in the afternoon, when the fight was the hottest. His aftern foot putt for a 3 on the ninth green in the second round when he had to get it to halve the hole will long be remembered by those In many ways the struggle between

In many ways 'he struggle between Barnes and Hutchinson was an edd match. The boner, which like a fickle jade usually flits from one man to the other, remained constant to Hutchinson from the third tee to the tenth this morning, a stretch of seven holes. Then the lead at last when he holed that a seventh grown was kenting to say. Barnes in the lead at last when he holed it on the seventh green, and another just as every one was beginning to say. "Won't Barnes ever get the honor?" the tall Englishman captured it by winning the ninth, and once he had gained the right to drive first never relinquished it until he came to the 'welfth tee in the afternoon. Twenty drives without givaing up the honor is pretty nearly a record, and when the closeness of the match is considered it appears all the match is considered it appears all the stancy of the honor implies, Hutchinson thad things his own way early in the match. The first hole was halved in the to the second Jock banged out a great spoon shot against the wind that first rose toward the heavens like a last end then settled gently down to level terms again. Barness had to play a great shot, however, to keep himself in the running on the twelfth for his hooked drive left his ball under a tree, the branches of which were so low that he could hardly swing his club. After a good deal of adjusting his feet and altering his swing ho punched the ball out and the gollery burst into applause when it landed fairly on the green.

Histerianon Stops His Ball.

On the thirteenth the impetuous Hutchinson performed a little trick that was trapped and after Barnes had chipped up to within a yard of the cup. Jock essayed the task of extricating his ball from the pit. He swung at it in the approved fashion, but as the ball rose it hit the face of the trup and bounded back. For ten minutes of the third period the Jersey boys fought offensively and retained command. Then they began to wabble. Their terrific pace of the earlier periods had sapped their speed and they seemed to tire. They fought courageously, but fight as they might they were unable to stop the rushes of Middlebury's big backs. Even at that they might have been returned the victors if Marshall had not failed in an excerner. have been returned the victors if Marshall had not failed in an emergency.

With the ball one yard from their goal line Marshall received an opportunity to punt. In his cagerness to loot it far down the field he became a trifle nervous and his kick went low. It was blocked by a Middlebury lad, who fell on it across the line.

The red jerseyed Jerseyltes started off in a manner that would indicate that they were going to win and win by a big score. They rushed the Middlebury eleven down the field and quickly scored a touchdown, Marshall carrying the bell over on a five yard dash through left tackle. Dueghnee bloked the goal.

In the second period Stevens were the aggressors throughout. They kept the ball in Middlebmy's territory through-out, but stubbern stands near the goal line prevented them from scoring.

During the early part of the third period the Engineers continued their rushing tactics and twice had the ball within kicking distance of the goal. But they preferred to rush it down the field and as a result lost their "steam" and Middlebury logan to gain ground.

Once on this ground satisfactors the Once on this ground gaining spree the Vermont eleven pressed on ceaselessly and by a series of line rushes tallied, Howers taking the ball over through centre from the three yard line. Lang failed to kick goal.

The other touchdown came a few minutes before time was called. After the Vermont boys had rushed the ball down vermont boys and rushed the ball down the field to Stevens's one yard line the Jerseyltes got it on downs. With such a short time to play and the ball in their hands it seemed as though Stevens would be returned the victor. It was necessary for them to punt and a good punt would keep them ahead until the game was over. But Marshall fatled. His kick was intercented and was intercepted and when a Vermont lad grabbed it on the other side of the goal line the contest was practically

Only a few first downs were made and these on end runs, not on line plunges. Fumbling was frequent on both sides, but the Violet team seemed to make misses at the wrong time or when a score might have been made had not the ball been lost.

Despite all of the work during the past week the Violet's interference and open play work were the poor features of its attack. The interference was especially lacking on the wide end runs from the fake kick formation. Neither team succeeded in working a forward pass, although each tried a number of times.

Chindler and Curtis, the Haverford ends, loomed up as the individual stars of the game. Kicking played the most important part in the contest and on each attempt these two men were down did advance into Columbia's territory the like tracks.

Early in the game it became evident For the next five minutes the ball changed hands frequently on punts. Finally Sangres caught a punt on the run and raced to the five yard line before he was downed. Ramsey plunged through left guard across the goal line for the first touchdown. He also kicked the goal.

New York made its only score in the second quarter. After a renewal of the kicking duel Hammerschlag caught a kick at the nifty yard line and squeezed through the Quaker team until he was brought down five yards from the goal. On the next play the ball was fumbled, but Weinheimer recovered and crawled across the line. Cann kicked the goal, tieing the score.
